

Dear Doctor;

I would like to try a transdermal (topical) pain cream to help alleviate my pain.

I understand that topical pain creams are neither approved nor disapproved by the FDA. I am also aware that physicians are within their legal rights to prescribe pain creams.

It is my understanding that these creams have a high degree of effectiveness and the side effect profile is minimal compared to oral pain killers and anti-inflammatory medications.

I know that topical pain creams can only be made by a "Compounding Pharmacy." The pharmacy I am working with is Kohana Pharmacy in San Luis Obispo, California. Their phone number is:

(805) 542-0864

If you call Kohana, they will discuss the various types of creams they compound and help you select one that will help my particular type of pain.

In addition, they have an easy-to-use form to facilitate the ordering process. Upon request, Kohana will send you their form. Kohana can also ship prescriptions to my door!

Thank you for your help!
